The design of the engine followed typical Perkins practices of the time, using the 'Aeroflow' indirect combustion system and CAV in-line fuel pump. Expansion of the production facilities at the Eastfield site were made to cater for the machining of major components and assembly and test alongside the existing P series engines and the new L4 tractor engine.

THE P6 ENGINE: A DESIGN AHEAD OF ITS TIME. While the Wolf and Leopard engines of the mid 1930s had put the Perkins Company on the map and demonstrated the practicality of the diesel engine in relatively small trucks and passenger cars, it was the next design conceived by Charles Chapman that was destined to be the most important engine produced in the early years.
